WILL MAKE LAST FIGHT FOR RICHESON

Strong Effort Being Made to Secure Commutation of Sentence

Boston, May 5.—The final fight for life in behalf of Clarence V. T. Richeson who, while a Baptist minister, with a pastorate in Cambridge, and engaged to marry a wealthy young woman, poisoned his former sweetheart, Avis W. Linnell of Hyannis, has been sentenced to be electrocuted in the week beginning May 19, but his attorneys hope to prevail upon Governor Foss to allow a petition for clemency to go to the executive council which holds its regular meeting Wednesday.

Richeson's attorneys are hopeful of success. "I feel confident that Richeson will not forfeit his life in the electric chair," declared William A. Morse, of Richeson's counsel. He said further that "circumstances such as cannot be overlooked prevail, which would make the taking of his life most unjustifiable."

"These 'circumstances' upon which the plea for commutation of the death sentence to one of life imprisonment will be based, are understood to be connected largely with the claim that Richeson was suffering from a form of insanity when he gave Avis Linnell the poison which caused her death Oct. 14, 1911.

Relatives, friends and acquaintances will be called upon to testify as to certain characteristics of Richeson, which his attorneys claim are those of a man unsound in mind. Alonists who have examined him in Charles street jail also will be summoned by the defense. One of these has recently declared that Richeson was at present partly insane.

Every living member of the family of the former minister, headed by his aged father, Col. Thomas Varland Richeson of Amherst, Va., is expected here by Tuesday to aid in the condemned murderer's fight for life. Attorney John L. Lee of Lynchburg, Va., who has been working in Richeson's behalf, left Boston a week ago to secure depositions and arrange for the attendance at a hearing of witnesses from the middle west, where Richeson attended college and held several pastorates, and from Richeson's former home in Virginia.

A deposition already has been secured and is in the hands of Governor Foss. It is understood, from Mrs. Moses Grant Edmunds, mother of the young woman Richeson was engaged to marry. It was said here today that Miss Violet Edmunds, Richeson's fiancée, who has been missing since shortly after Richeson's arrest at her fashionable home in Brookline early on the morning of Oct. 20 last, has been located in New York. According to this report, Miss Edmunds has given herself up to a life as a worker in the slums, being at present connected with God's Providence House on East Side. It is not believed she will be called upon to attend the hearing before the governor and council.

PRESIDENT BELDEN LOOKS OVER THE EXETER ROAD

It was Planned to Tear up Rails This Week

D. A. Belden and General Manager F. P. Woodman of the New Hampshire Electric railway system, were here on Saturday looking over the Exeter line and planning for the removal of the rails. President Belden was asked by the Herald if his company would operate the road provided the company was given a guarantee of interest on a new capital of $75,000. He agreed to do some figuring and communicate his decision to the Herald. The company had intended to commence the work of taking up the iron this week Wednesday.

COAST ARTILLERY DESERTER BROUGHT HERE

Ralph Dow, a deserter from the Coast Artillery service at Fort Warren, Boston Harbor, who was arrested at Concord on Saturday, was brought here today by Deputy Marshal Rowe of Concord and delivered to the army authorities at Fort Constitution.

Dow was arrested on a charge of breaking and entering the store of Parker Brothers at Goffstown on Wednesday night last. He claimed that he did not do the job but simply watched on the outside while his pal, James, worked on the inside. Money, cigars, tobacco and other articles missing from the store were found on his person.

ADVANCE GUARD ARRIVES.

Grand Trunk Engineers and Surveyors Begin Work Today at Concord.

Concord, May 5.—The advance guard of the Grand Trunk railroad's forces is due in Concord tomorrow, when George M. Thompson, chief engineer, and a corps of sixteen surveyors, will prepare to take the field and outline the most feasible route for the proposed line of the Southern New England railroad. The surveying force will be largely in Concord later.

The men will survey for a double track line and all masonry, bridges and station sites, as well as the roadbed, will be planned on a double track basis. The work of the survey will be pushed with all possible speed in order that a definite lay out may be filed with the court at an early date.

Mr. Thompson, who will be in charge of the field work, is one of the leading engineers of the country, and until very recently was connected with the Boston and Maine railroad.

ARRESTED IN PORTLAND.

Sailors Told Officers They Were Deserters From Navy.

The Portland police on Sunday took three United States navy sailors into custody for safe keeping. The men were found at the Union station and they said they were deserters.

A telegram was sent to the commandant of this navy yard, who replied that the men were not deserters, but stragglers, as they are called, as their ship, the Vulcan, is out of commission at the Portsmouth navy yard.

The sailors say that while the Vulcan was at the Lamorne coaling station before proceeding to this city several days ago they got left on shore while looking over the town. The men will be sent here today where they will be paid what is due them.

ELIAS SMITH, HIS LIFE AND WORK

While we are looking backward a century there comes to mind a name that has figured to a considerable extent in the religious history of Portsmouth.

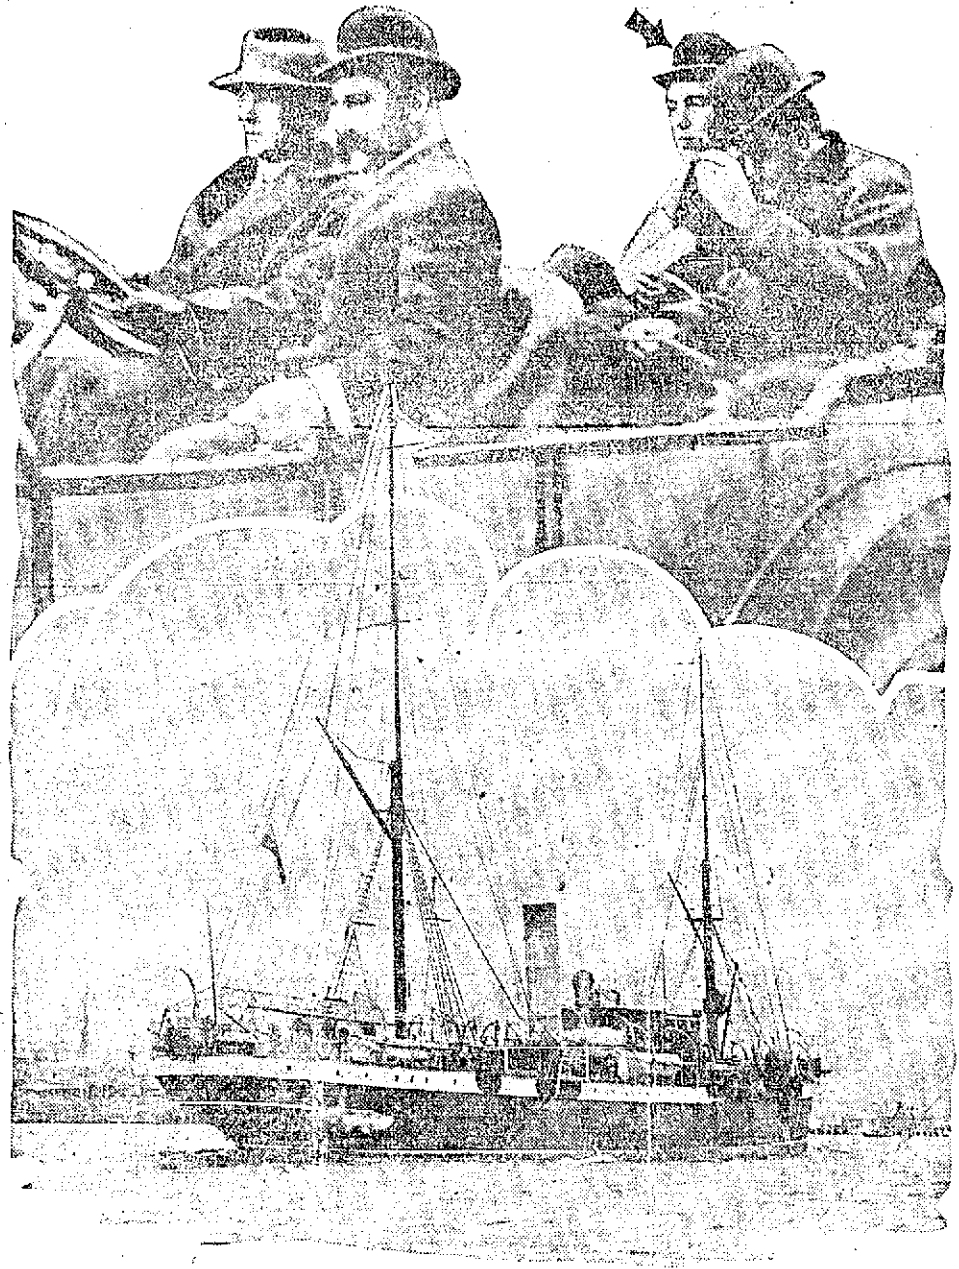

The name of Elias Smith has frequently occurred in connection with the organization and establishment of several local Christian churches (principally Baptist) denominations, with more or less mystery as to who he was and just what he did in Portsmouth; and this has led to the perusal of his autobiography, a book of over 400 pages, published in Portsmouth in 1816, "printed by Deek and Foster, sold by the author, No. 2 Ladd street, and James F. Stokes, No. 1, Market street."

This story of his life reminds us to some degree of the experiences of other self-made men, such as Pres. Lincoln, Vice Pres. H. Wilson and many others who began the upward struggle for a higher and better life under supreme difficulties and discouragements, and climbed the ladder to success round by round until they reached the top.

Elias Smith's aspirations were marked, not so much by ambition as by a desire to acquire wisdom and an understanding of the teachings of the Bible. His father was for fifty years strongly Baptist in his belief and affiliations, but joined the "Christian" church the year before his death.

Elias was born in Lyme, Conn., June 17, 1769, the eldest of three brothers and two sisters, his mother being nineteen years old at the time of his birth. When he was thirteen years of age in 1782, his father sold his possessions in Lyme and purchased 100 acres of land in Woodstock, Vermont. They were thirteen days on the road thither, with their worldly goods, and Elias greatly enjoyed the travel and sight seeing, although he had to walk almost the entire way. But his description of the farm and the miserable hovel they were to call their home is pathetic. In approaching the house they had to cut their way over the road blocked with logs and stumps through which a cart had never been, until when, within forty rods of it, their father pointed out

Titanic Morgue Ship Entering Halifax Port; Vincent Astor and Party After His Father's Body.

Halifax, N. S., was a city of mourning when the cable ship Mackay-Bennett arrived bearing bodies of victims of the Titanic wreck which had been picked up at sea. Flies were half arrested, and the city's church bells were tolled. Vincent Astor, his friend, Nicholas Biddle, and Captain Roberts of the Astor yacht identified Colonel Astor's body and accompanied the remains to New York in a private car. The arrow indicates young Astor. Beside him is Mr. Biddle. Captain Roberts is seated with the chauffeur.

the house they were to inhabit. "It from any house. Around the house lay in different directions excepting a small place where the house stood. The house was made of split basswood logs, locked together at the corners. There was no floor to the house, nor was there any roof to it. The grass had grown up within these wooden walls, and there was one large stump in the middle of the house, which, to heighten my trouble, my father said would do for a light stand. We made a fire by the side of a log, cooked some dinner and let our horse eat down the grass in the house before we prepared it for a lodging place for the night." In view of these discomforts Elias started to run away back to Connecticut, but his father caught him and ordered him back.

They were obliged to sell their oxen, cart and horse to pay for the land, and were thus left in a very poor situation to clear up the farm, which could hardly be done without the strength of the oxen. Thus they were in the wilderness under most discouraging circumstances—the father, mother and five young children.

Winter found them in this condition, and that first cold season was an experience trying indeed. Elias tells of some of his personal troubles. They had patched up the house as well as they could, with the aid of some neighbors, but it was a poor protection from the cold. His father obtained some funds from the sale of his property in Lyme, when he had him to purchase a yoke of oxen. These and their two cows had to be kept through the winter, by selling elm and maple trees and cutting off the limbs for the cattle, the small ends of which, and a little hay, served for their fodder. The snow covered the ground from the first of December till the next April, and little could be done on the farm. The sugar season with all its toil came in the early spring, during which Elias was for a month laid up, his foot being badly cut with an axe. As the summer came on they thought they could get along with one cow, and sold the other for grain. It was a close chance, as provisions were scarce, and they were indeed in dire distress when the remaining cow was found dead, having been cast and unable to recover herself in the wood.

These were the days of the American Revolution, and scarcely everywhere prevailed. Mr. Smith says: "The summer I was fifteen years old was a distressing one to us and many others. For many weeks before harvest almost the whole we had for food was a little milk thickened with flour, and not enough of that. This was all of the bread kind we had through the day. We had a little milk to drink at night. For many days I ate my breakfast of milk thickened with flour and went to work; by eleven o'clock my food would be all gone, and my strength with it. When I could work no longer I used sometimes to take a basket and travel a mile or two among the raspberry bushes, eat some and bring the rest home for my supper, with the small portion of milk allotted to me with the family."

But we have not room to go into details of that early life, so full of discouragements. This will suffice to give an idea of the early days of Elias Smith. This kind of life he was somewhat inured to from earlier experiences, and endured hardships and troubles with a brave spirit and uninterrupted health. In the cold winter weather he was but thinly and coarsely clad, and the work of the pioneer is always severe.

At sixteen there was awakened in him the desire for education. His father reluctantly consented to his attendance at school for a single month. This opened to him his first deas of oven the rudiments of learning. His story of his progress against the greatest obstacles, and his intense study at every spare moment, even by the evening firelight, and almost at the expense of his eyesight, in consequence of which he suffered for years afterwards, arouses our sympathy when we compare it with the too often carelessly missed opportunities that have been afforded us by the educational methods of later years. He accomplished a great task in thus fitting himself, first for a teacher, which occupation he followed, while he pursued the study of the Scriptures by a slow but persistent course until he became a preacher of what he considered the Gospel, and was at length enrolled as a minister—all this through a method of self-culture, such as has been the making of many a poverty-stricken boy.

The result was a theology peculiarly his own, built up from his study of the Bible, to which he found all his religious tenets, and to he expressed terms of which he confined all his beliefs. Whatever was not plainly told in holy writ he would not do, nor suffer to be done if he could help it. The settlement of ministers, their title of Reverend, their peculiarity in dress, or any methods of church government or policy that were not directly sanctioned by the Bible, he would have none of. His ministry for many years was evangelical and his field wide-spread, throughout New England; sometimes remaining for a while in one place, but always desirous to be in motion. He objected or a long while to any dress that would distinguish him as a preacher, but wore plain clothes, and it was some years before he possessed an overcoat. It was with great reluctance that he followed the suggestion of his ministerial friends and procured a suit of black broadcloth when he was at length installed as pastor at Woburn, Mass.

Previous to going to Woburn, he became a settled minister at Salisbury, N. H., where he remained about five years, but was restless under what he considered as bondage and longed for the freedom to go and come whither his call seemed to take him. But in 1797 he accepted a call to Woburn where he remained until 1801, with still a troubled conscience at being a settled pastor.

All this time he had been making friends and acquaintances among the Baptist clergy, and had acquired considerable reputation in various places. The poor and ignorant boy of sixteen had become a minister of some renown and of many peculiarities at thirty. But he could not hold to the doctrines of the Baptist church, nor to those of any other denomination. He chose for himself the simple name of "Christian"—a follower of Christ according to the belief that he obtained from his Bible. This belief he evolved from a "ous, disinterested and careful study, and without regard to any other sources of information. It appears, however, that this same "Christian" faith prevailed in other parts of the country.

With this mind he came to Portsmouth in 1802, and established here the church which still bears the simple denomination of Christian. We leave for another chapter the story of his early experiences in this old town, and the difficulties attending the early days of what is now the Court Street Christian Church, together with some account of his subsequent life.

Sanford.

The local high school lost another game on Saturday when a bunch of errors in the eleventh inning gave the game to Rochester high. The game was played at the South play grounds and Hennessey started to pitch. In the third the visitors reached him and scored two runs, and he gave way in the fourth to Ralph Brackett, who pitched a fine game, until the eleventh when he lost his game with a bad throw.

The locals tied the score in the eighth and the first of the eleventh the visitors won the game on poor play.

Jacques, the first fan up was safe on Hett's error at short. Littlefield was passed, and with two men on Herson sent a grounder down the first base line. Brackett got it and threw wild to first and Jacques scored, Littlefield going to third. A pass ball scored him and Beaudoine drove a ball to Wright, who threw to second and Herson scored on the throw in.

Badger was disabled in the fifth, while sliding to second he collided with Jacques and broke his collar bone.

Pittsburg Club Would Give $25,000
For Ed Konetchy of St. LouisED. KONETCHY

St. Louis, May 6.—There is a small sized fortune in sight for a minor league manager who can develop a star first baseman. There are several major league clubs that would be willing to pay a snug sum for a man who can fill the bill at the initial station. They are Washington and Cleveland in the American league and Pittsburgh and Chicago in the National. Secretary Wil-

Ham Locke of the Pittsburgh club says the Pirates management would be willing to give $25,000 for "Big Ed" Konetchy of the St. Louis Nationals. According to Mr. Locke, the Cardinals' star is the ideal guardian of station one. His presence on the Pittsburgh team would mean a pennant for the Pirates. The Pittsburgh club recently made the offer to the St. Louis club, but it was turned down.

A SIGNIFICANT WARNING.

Just two years ago the Atlantic Monthly published an article entitled "The Man on the Bridge." It was written by Charles Terry De-laney, an officer on one of the great ocean liners, and it excited considerable controversy throughout the country. Indeed, so many indignant protests and denials were immediately put forth by the press and by agents and officers of various steamship lines that the Atlantic printed a response to this onslaught in its August number, in which Mr. Delaney backed up his statements by a few more telling facts.

In view of the late terrible disaster it is of interest to turn back to the article in question, which points out many things that are being vitally considered at the present moment. He dwells upon the dangers of running at a great speed, both in the fog and in the vicinity of ice, and cites the hair breadth escapes which he has experienced. He states that the captains and officers of the liners are underpaid and overworked and dwells upon many other points well worth considering.

After setting forth the dangers of the "ice track," he describes his own experience of a few years before: "The night being hazy and the ship in the ice track, I kept hanging on, until finally, after giving up hope of the weather clearing, I did decide to call the master and start the whistle. The responsibility was his, not mine. But before this could be done, almost alongside the ship was an iceberg towering up about three hundred feet. The ship passed within twenty feet of it, going at the rate of twenty-one knots; had there been a submerged trailer attached to the berg the ship's bottom would have been ripped open. Cold as I was at the time, I went colder still, and vowed that I would never again take such risks. Had the whistle been sounded, it is possible that the warning of the berg's approach would have been given me by the echo."

After stating at length numerous conditions which he feels should be changed, the writer declares: "Until some fine vessel with her precious cargo is sent to the bottom through collision, these things, I believe, will not be rectified. It is only by good luck that these has not happened already. But luck will change some day. Who will pay the piper then? Not the worn-out man on the bridge, I hope."

In commenting upon this article, the Review of Reviews wrote at this time: "If this is true it is time that the public at once took some action in this direction, and if it is not true, the article should never have been printed."—Boston Herald.

MONDAY, MAY 6, 1912.

Out in Pasco, Washington, there is an editor that is just at the present time enjoying an unique position. By day he edits his paper and by night he is serving a thirty days sentence for perjury. While we are sorry to think that an editor would commit perjury, we cannot but feel consoled by the fact that he is at night escaping some of the wise-actors who would advise him how to run a newspaper and also make life miserable for him in forty other different ways.

The Granite State Free Press well says it was stated the morning after the primary that Gov. Bass was not discouraged by the result and should keep up his fight. Well, he ought to be discouraged and ought to quit that kind of a fight. As Governor he has no business trying to shape the political course of this State, to say nothing of trying to boss the party. "Let the people RULE!" Let the Governor SERVE!

The Lebanon Free Press says the Taft victory in New Hampshire is most significant. Right in the home of progressivism, with a popular governor spending time and money in a strenuous effort to deliver the State to Roosevelt, with the Roosevelt League conducting a longer, more vigorous and more heavily financed campaign than the Taft League, the people of New Hampshire have shown their disapproval of third term, of Roosevelt and of his doctrines.

BIRD'S EYE VIEWS.

Why talk of the delights of an ocean voyage, and pay your good money to enjoy it, and then risk your life to get through it at the greatest possible speed?

In his strenuous efforts to gain for the people a chance to rule, race suicide and several other formerly important issues seem to be forgotten by the Progressive Roosevelt.

The English paper claim the Titanic investigation is undignified. It would certainly be dreadful if they should go around in their shirt-sleeves to save people from drowning.

There should be some means of enabling American patriotism to secure an injunction against the reckless use of the names of George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln for private political purposes.

It becomes evident that the public will never be permitted to forget the tragedy which put an end to Stanford White's usefulness unless Harry Thaw is restored unconditionally to freedom.

A Black Hand gang is said to have taken to the Blue Ridge mountains. They will not last long if some of the moonshiners take a dislike to them.

Col. Roosevelt has decided to retire the question, "What shall we do with our ex-Presidents?" and substitute the query, "What shall we do with our Presidents?"

Although all of our presidential candidates have been called Filibusters and Judases, we have the feeling that if we lent any of them $5 we would get it back.

The stock market has been advancing through all this disturbing politics; but how else could the Jews be persuaded that it is needful to have the cheering job?

The men engaged in the harvest business may begin to wonder whether Mr. G. W. Perkins has not shown what in political circles is known as a pernicious activity. Instead of being the victim of the big stick Lorimer is being utilized as the stick itself.

Champ Clark has managed to pick up quite a following without putting himself to the tremendous exertion of creating an overwhelming popular demand.

Literary iconoclasm is threatened. Several people in New England are developing such audacity as to go to the polls and disagree with the opinions of the Outlook.

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

Ocean Climates Best.
While practically the whole continental United States territory has been shivering and freezing since winter set in here in January, Alaska has been having its warmest winter on record. No snow has fallen since Christmas and in the vicinity of Juneau bycincths and tulips were in bloom at the end of February. This condition is not laid by scientists nowadays to the Kuro Sivo or Japanese current but to the ocean climate which our west coast enjoys from the Pacific ocean, the same as western Europe does from the Atlantic. In the northern hemisphere it is well known that the prevailing winds are westerly. Ocean climates are always milder and more equable than continental climates, having neither the extreme in heat or cold of the latter, consequently the westerly winds blowing over the widest ocean of the world, give to the southern Alaskan coast a more comfortable winter than is found in portions of the country much further south of the east coast where a continental climate prevails.
The Kuro Sivo (blue salt) or Japanese current is distinctly discernible in the Pacific a few hundred miles eastward of Yokohama. It is very blue in color, and very warm for the waters comprising it have been blown across the wide Pacific from the northern part of the equatorial regions by the persistent north east trades. It is finally lost in the waste of waters however and cannot be traced further than about 45 degrees north latitude nor further east than between the 150th and 160th meridians. This is the end of the Kuro Sivo. There it merges in the general easterly drift of the northern Pacific.
This current plays the same role however in the Pacific that the Gulf Stream does in the Atlantic. It is commonly known now that the Gulf Stream disappears, as a current, about 300 miles east of Newfoundland. Not a trace of it can be found further east. The mild climate of northwestern Europe is due not to the Gulf Stream, but to the prevailing eastward and northeastward drift of the air currents which distribute the heat conserved by the whole of the Atlantic Ocean north of latitude 35 degrees.—Marine Journal.

Another Clincher.
Taft distanced Roosevelt on the preference vote at the extreme right of the ballot. Taft distanced Roosevelt in the contest for alternates at large, where no fifth man intervened.
And now it transpires that if the vote cast for the Taft district delegates be aggregated, it exceeds by 3394 the corresponding footing of the Roosevelt column.
Here are three evidences that the people of Massachusetts desired Taft's administration, and were defeated in their purpose of expressing this wish by the chambersomeness of the ballot and peculiar place on it of Mr. Seiberlich. Let the word go on to the country that Massachusetts expressed a desire for Taft's nomination. The majority, though slight would have been sufficient.—Boston Herald.

LITTLE GIRL FOUND HIDING IN EXETER BARN
Had Slept Out of Doors for Two Nights

Exeter, May 5.—Elsie Jenness, the girl who has been sought for by hundreds of townspeople since Friday night, was found about 9 o'clock last night in the barn of Clinton D. Hatch where she was sent for milk previous to her disappearance. She was in such a weak condition that she could not say much for herself, but stated that she had slept out of doors for two nights, and that her only nourishment was a quart of milk.
C. D. Hatch and Prof. George H. Sellick found her, their notice being attracted by a noise in the barn as they were standing in the doorway. It was only on assurance that she would not be punished that she came from her hiding place. Medical aid was rendered, and it is thought she will recover.

DISCHARGE DAY

In Federal Prison, Atlanta, Ga., By Ex-Convict 3479.

When one reads or hears of the improved conditions surrounding prisoners now in penal institutions the question arises—where is any punishment in imprisonment? Some people imagine that one sent to prison for a crime should suffer some form of pain or torture. To inflict any such punishment indicates only the primitive animal nature. Physical pain of any form of infliction has the least terrors to the mind of all the pains suffered by imprisonment. Some religious enthusiasts inflict on their own bodies awful physical tortures and seem to enjoy the agony, inflicting pain by any form of physical contact or neglect arouses a combative resentful state of mind. For that reason all forms of physical punishment, such as blows on the body, hard unreasonable labor tasks, starvation, chaining the body, or humiliation of any kind drives a man to a criminal attitude of mind instead of reforming him.
There is a punishment, though, in imprisonment which can never be changed by any new system of prison reform. It is the awful condemnation of conscience and memory in the silent solemn hours of night. No matter how pleasant the surroundings, may be in prison during day time; no matter whether the activities are interesting or not, when night comes the prisoner enters the torture chamber of silence. The shadows in the cell walls add gloom to the darkened scene. The magnetic influence of sound during the day stimulates nerves and brain to action. Now all is still and the reaction brings an awful sense of desolation.
The prisoner lies down in hopes that slumber will give him a short respite from the harrowing scenes of memory. At first he falls into a sweet repose to be aroused a few minutes later to a more vivid consciousness. With nerves unstrung and restless frame he tosses from side to side on his hard and cheerless bed. With startling distinctness every act of his past life comes to his mind. Scenes he had not thought of in years now pass before him. He sees his home, hears the voice of his mother, and his heart melts in the memory of the long forgotten sound. Then a small still voice whispers to his soul—Gone! gone! for ever! He sighs in agony, moaning, "My soul! and I am in the penitentiary!"
The specters of memory are the silent witnesses pointing the accusing finger of condemnation at the tormented man. Hour after hour he suffers in this mental torture chamber of hell. He tosses from side to side and moans in agony. He prays for the coming of the morning above it all he hears the solemn words: "The way of the transgressor is hard."

But in every prisoner's life there is a one bright shining point of hope. It is the coming day of his discharge. The day when he steps out into freedom and from under the control of another's mind. Amidst the sorrow and darkness of his nights of despair, he sees it shining afar. Ten thousand times he has pictured the coming of that morn. But, oh, how long and dreary are the dreary nights. Ransom assures him that as one as the day follows night just as certain it is for that day to come. "Home Thoughts From Abroad," "De Then comes impatience which frets Gethsemane," "Prospect," "Epitaph to him with its doubts, and the misery Asolando." All interested are, cor of the last thirty or forty days. He daily invited.

fears something will happen to prevent his discharge. Maybe an officer will be at the gate to "plack" him as soon as he steps outside for something else he may have done. He counts each slowly passing day.
When the glorious hour has come, he is dressed once more in citizen's clothes. His valuables have been returned to him. He has received five dollars for his time. He has signed his release papers. Now he is moving towards the great iron door that opened to admit him long ago. The guard puts a key in the lock, turns it, it slowly swings open and he steps out into the world of light and joy.

Like the mighty billows of ocean the air of freedom surges around him. He thrills with the pleasure of most ecstatic joy. His blood races through his veins. Every faculty of his mind is brilliant in display. All nature smiles upon him. The birds sing to him. The breezes caress him. The sunlight welcomes him to a world of action. The long crushed bud of hope has now blossomed into the red tinted rose of reality. He is free! free! free! And now comes the rest of his character. His future depends on a choice he must make.

There are two roads in front of every ex-convict who steps outside the penitentiary gate. One leads to the left and always into the darkness and shadows of sin. At first its garish lights promise pleasure, but farther on comes the shadow and gloom. The road always leads into dark places and mysterious shades, to fields of desolation and despair. No sounds of industry is heard. Along that road are found the saloon the brothel and the den of vice. The midnight revel, the boisterous song, the oath of rage are on the listener's ear.

The other road leads to the right. It goes always onward and upward. Along this road are found the home, the church and the school. There are no pitfalls, no mysterious places, no temptations to mislead. Ex-convict choose the right road.

TRUSTEES WILL SETTLE THE DISPUTE TODAY

Durham, N. H., May 5.—A committee of trustees of New Hampshire College, where the three lower classes are on strike, met Monday morning with President W. D. and probably will demand concessions. Freshman, sophomore and junior classes, numbering 179 students have been on a strike three days, because the administration committee refused to reinstate William H. L. Brackett of Greenland, president of the sophomore class, promised to be offered suspended for the remainder of the college year, for ringing a false alarm of fire.

The trustees who will reach Durham Monday are: Warren Brown of hill, Mass., and H. R. McCartney, '14, of New London, N. H., interviewed every trustee Saturday. They presented the student side of the case and asked the trustees to act. The trustees assured them that the matter would be settled amicably.

The students are willing to compromise, the popular sentiment being that they will go back to classes, provided Brackett is reinstated while his conduct which resulted in suspension is being considered. Gov. Bass, who is a trustee, Saturday talked with several of his associates. It is understood that he wishes to have the strike ended as soon as possible and to have the students return to classes.

President Gibbs refuses further discussion of the strike. The penalty in case the sophomores and freshmen do not return to college exercises by Monday noon is expulsion, without honorable dismissal papers. Juniors will be expelled unless they return by Wednesday noon. No member of the three lower classes returned to classes Saturday.

The co-eds, numbering about 20, are also enlisted in the rolls of the strikers, and are among their staunchest supporters. Considerable merriment was had Saturday when a party of Boston photographers arrived.

When a co-ed saw a photographer she picked up her skirts and ran, hiding her face in a sweater. The visitors were also in trouble with some of the militant male strikers who threatened to smash the cameras.

The support that the students are receiving from their parents is about evenly divided for and against the strike. One mother made the statement to the sophomore committee, commending the action of her son in standing behind the sophomore class president. Other students have received telegrams commanding them to return to college. In every case, these commands have been disregarded.

Saturday afternoon's trains carried a number of students homeward, and only the members of the senior class will be in the town today.

Resolutions expressing disapproval of the faculty action in suspending Brackett but directing the striking senior to resume studies until the trustees have had time to act upon their complaint, were adopted at a meeting of the class today.

The resolutions are in part:

"Resolved that whereas we as students of the New Hampshire College, are here at the expense of the state, it behooves us to not in such a way as to bring the most honor to the institution, and that the president of this institution as a representative of the state should be treated by us with respect due to one in his position. Be it further

"Resolved that, since the present strike is wasting valuable time, and giving our college an undesirable position before the citizens of this state, we do all in our power to aid in the settlement of the present difficulties, to the best interests of the college. Be it further

"Resolved that the class of 1912 disapproves of the action of the faculty in suspending Mr. Brackett, and furthermore, that we disapprove of the administration of this college, which has led to the present crisis. Be it further

"Resolved, that we attend all classes regularly, until the trustees have had time to act upon the present situation and to answer our communication."

ONCE EMBLEM OF ROYALTY

Fur of the Ermine, Really a Wonder of Nature, Has Been Prized for Many Centuries.

The fame of the ermine as a creature "patronized by royalty" dates back to the reign of King Edward III, of England, who made it a punishable offense for any person except those of royal birth to wear the fur of this handsome little animal. This tyrannous restriction has been long rescinded.

The metamorphosis of the ermine from dull reddish brown to purest white is among the greatest wonders of nature. According to Bell, the change is effected "not by the loss of the summer coat and a substitution of a new one for the winter, but by the actual change of color in the hair." This remarkable process has a parallel in the change of plumage as exemplified in the ptarmigan, but in the case of that bird the change of pigment only instead of entire plumage takes place in the spring and not in the autumn. The ermine and the ptarmigan, then, though resembling one another in this change of dress, actually take on their winter coats in opposite fashion, yet in each case a white winter dress is adopted. It is further worthy of note that as in the ermine the tail remains always black, so in the ptarmigan certain feathers of the tail are permanently of the same color, no matter what the season of the year may be.

HASTENED TO MAKE HIS WILL

Dyspeptic Convinced That Mistake Could Mean Nothing Less Than Imminent Dissolution.

The dyspeptic who gives prayerful thought to every bite he eats glances dubiously over the French dinner card in which a dozen items were marked with a cross in red ink. "To my untutored mind," said he, "those things look all right. Some other fellow with a stomach has been here ahead of me and has marked off a few things that a Christian can eat without inviting sudden death."

In his delight at finding the dinner problem solved the dyspeptic ordered a fix of the red-cross dishes. They were unpronounceable and unrecognizable but they tasted good and he liked them. When the crumb of the last course had disappeared the dyspeptic said gently to the waiter: "Run off that must have been who ate at his table ahead of me."

"Yes, sir," assented the waiter. "He was one of them diet cranks that drive restaurant people crazy by marking up the bill of fare with red danger signals before the dishes that no body that ain't got a sound digestion can afford to trifle with."

"Good Lord!" moaned the dyspeptic.

Chinamen as Students.

There are today in some of the universities of America and Europe Chinese students who in laboratory work in physics and other natural sciences are distinguishing themselves even in comparison with western students. The Chinese have a power of application and patience and a capacity for detail that is destined to bring success in scientific inquiry where once they get the background, adopt the method and make the start. The irresistible progress destined to be made by western science in the Chinese empire will surely undermine Chinese faith in the "Book of Changes," which is at the base of Chinese philosophy. Whatever is permanently true will remain in imperishable blocks, but the structure as a whole will fall in ruins, with Chinese deals pitilessly and irrevocably shattered. At this critical period of the integration of outworn forces, what new moral and spiritual ideas are to replace the old in order that the new state of these people may be no worse than the first?—Dr. C. K. Edmunds in The Popular Science Monthly.

Peculiarly Mean Swindler.

An elderly man has just been arrested in Berlin, Germany, who had won quite a reputation as a swindler of widows. He was in the habit of visiting the cemeteries and bringing himself under the notice of widows who had come to weep over their husbands' graves. He would engage a bereaved woman in conversation and then pour forth to her his sorrow over the recent loss of his own wife. Acquaintanceships begun in this way invariably grew into friendships, and that resulted in a proposal of marriage from the "widower" to the widow. The man would then borrow a sum of money from his future bride, or pawn some of her late husband's possessions and disappear. Some dozens of widows have been defrauded by him.

Her Proposal.

Miss Ethel Barrymore, apropos of leap year, told a story at the Colony club, in New York.

"A girl," she said, "joked calmly at a caller one evening and remarked: 'George, as it is leap year—'

"The caller turned rather pale.

"'As it is leap year,' she continued, 'and you have been calling regularly now four nights a week for a long, long time, George I propose—'

"'I'm not in a position to marry on my salary,' George broke in, hurriedly.

"'I know that well, George,' the girl pursued, 'and so, as it is leap year, I thought I'd propose that you lay on and give some of the more eligible boys a chance.'"

Lumber Carried Burro Back. The forests of Mexico are situated chiefly in the mountains at altitudes of 8,000 to 12,000 feet. In the lowlands of the tropics there are scattered mahogany trees and a variety of other hardwood timber. Owing to the inaccessibility of many of the tracts of timber in the mountains, comparatively few railroads have penetrated them. The chief means of getting out the roughly hewed timber and bringing it down from the higher altitudes is by burros. These little beasts of burden have powerful strength and endurance. They follow the narrowest and most dangerous mountain trails even when their bottles are loaded with the weight of enormous timbers. It is upon the backs of these burros that thousands of railroad cross-ties were brought down from the mountains, thus enabling the construction of the more modern lines of transportation.

Finest Coat in the World.

Anna Held, famous French comedienne and cantatrice, is the proud possessor of a wonderful garment created from skins of Russian sables which cost $25,000. The coat was made in Paris and required 110 skins, perfect in every detail. Their coloring is most uniform, and the pelts are of the same even texture. This valuable coat is made up on the kimono pattern. At the neck, instead of a collar, there is a scarf composed of four choice sable skins, all lined with ermine. There are four ermine tails on one end of the collar, and a head and three tails on the other. The scarf is fastened about the shoulders and neck by a hook. The coat when finished was said by experts on furs and their wearing to be the finest coat in the world owned by a single individual.

Her Little Knowledge.

The lady was reading a nautical novel. She struggled along bravely for a few minutes, but finally had to appeal to her husband. "Gerald," she said, "the author says that the boat was sailing 'wing and wing.' What does that mean? I've been on a yacht, but I never heard that before."

"That means," answered Gerald, "rejoicing in the fact that he, too, had spent several hours on a sailing vessel. 'That means that the schooner had her mains' out to port and her fores' out to starboard—or vice versa.' 'Oh, I see!' cried the lady. 'It's just like a chicken—a wing on each side. And now I understand why they call those little sails in the middle 'jibs.' It's short for 'jibble' of course. Isn't sailing interesting?"

Determined to Visit Birthplace.

"It was the only way I could visit my old home before I die." This is Henry Sack's excuse for disappearing from his farm near Oak Mills, about three weeks ago, and sailing to Europe. His son, John Sacks, received a letter from him recently. This was the first word his family received from him, although they learned that he sailed from New York on a transatlantic liner. Mr. Sacks is now at Berlin, Prussia, his birthplace. He is staying with relatives, he wrote, but expects to return in a month. He often expressed a wish to visit Germany, but his relatives objected in account of his age. He is eighty-two years old.—Kansas City Journal.

Knew Whose Room It Was.

A Chicago business woman has recently returned from a trip through Pennsylvania. At a small town there is a hotel where it is said George Washington used to stay when he was in that part of the country. The Chicago woman arrived at the little hotel after a theatrical company had been assigned rooms. She was assigned to a poor room on the top floor. At the breakfast table an actress who had a comfortable room said: "They gave me the room they used to give George Washington when he came here."

"Well," said the Chicago woman, "the one they gave me must be the one they gave Benedict Arnold when he came."

Remarkable Bible Verses.

The eighth verse of the third chapter of Zephaniah contains every letter including the initials, of the Hebrew language, while one will find in the twenty-first verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra every letter of the English alphabet except j. The verse reads as follows: "And I, even I, Attaxerxes the king, do make a decree to all the treasurers which are beyond the river, that whatsoever Ezra the priest, the scribe of the law of the God of heaven, shall require of you, it be done speedily."—Youth's World.

Market for Suckers.

Maine fishermen are finding that the once despised sucker, now known by the more aristocratic name of frost fish, is buying a market value for something besides smelt bait. Tons of them are being caught in Maine waters and shipped to the New York market, where they are bringing 12 and 14 cents a pound. Years ago the fishermen when finding these fish in small or bass nets used to throw them on the ice or overboard, as they had no market value.

Sensible Austrian Law.

Cooling couples who indulge in the questionable habit of courting by post may be interested to learn that in Austria the punishable offense of "lovers-to-variety" the "official" postal stamp, whether on a card or on a letter, to indicate their sentiments.

A SUNDAY MORNING FIRE

An alarm from box 23, corner of State and Washington streets, shortly before nine o'clock Sunday morning called the department to a house on Court street, occupied by Captain T. Harriman.

The fire which evidently started from a defective chimney, was confined to the ell, and the roof was badly damaged and the ell otherwise gutted. The damage is covered by insurance.

A WILD RUNAWAY.

A horse attached to a portion of a carriage created considerable excitement on Congress street Sunday evening, when he ran up Pleasant street and down Congress to Fleet street. On the Square John Lambert, who lives at the Prescott House, attempted to stop him, but he failed and was thrown and a gash cut in his head. He was treated in Green's drug store and was able to go home.

The horse started on Sagamore road near the bridge, where the driver, a young man, was thrown out, but escaped without injury. The carriage was completely wrecked.

There were five drunks on the police blotter Saturday night.

He Quit the Ship.

Coal to Go in Pocket.
Orders were received at the yard today not to unload the coal in the collier Vulcan into the yard coal pocket. It is thought that by such orders that the department intends to make a saving in handling the vessel's cargo and have the coal unloaded into scows and put aboard the vessels at the yard. The Vulcan

CONVICT HAS FERTILE BRAIN
Inventions of Real Worth the Work of Prisoner in Pennsylvania Penitentiary.

There was exhibited in the Eastern Penitentiary at Philadelphia a few days ago, six mechanical devices which one of the inmates of the institution has invented. The man, John Edwards, who is serving a long term for robbery, displayed so much ingenuity and skill in his work that the warden furnished him with money and gave him permission to spend his time in the perfection of his inventions.

One of the devices is a burglar alarm and doorbell. Another which the inventor calls an "internal combustor turbine," has aroused the curiosity of prominent mechanical engineers. It is operated by means of gravity and hydrostatic pressure. A "noiseless railroad crossing system" is another invention, the model of which he exhibited. He has applied for patents in Washington.

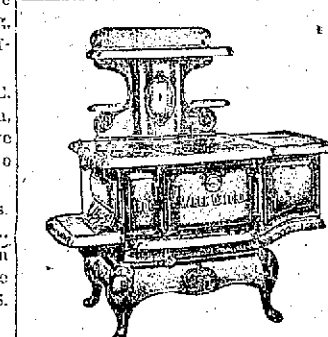

Edwards has invented an "ellipse graph," to be used by draftsmen and architects in drawing ellipses. He showed an improvement in padlocks where the tensile strength of the lock is equal to the strength of six other ordinary locks. He has perfected an advertising device which consists of pieces of wood which can be applied to almost any use, and upon which pictures have been drawn. Among the uses to which the broad boards can be put is in the construction of the backs of chairs.

OBITUARY

Miss Mary Nylan.

In the springtime of youth the ever busy Angel of Death has gathered another to himself in the person of Miss Mary Nylan, a former resident of this city, who passed away in Los Angeles, Cal., on April 29, aged 26 years.

Deceased left this city about a year ago to engage in a training course at the St. Peter's hospital in New Brunswick, N. J. She later went to Arizona and after a short stay, moved on to the west coast and took up nursing in a Los Angeles hospital where her death occurred. Her health gradually failed after beginning her work at that institution, and though every earthly aid was afforded the stricken young woman by those near and dear to her, she passed on to her eternal rest.

Miss Nylan was a young woman of rare talent. Of sweet and happy disposition the passing of such a young life so full of bright prospects is an especially sad one, and is felt with much sorrow by her many acquaintances in this city where she labored so long as a bookkeeper for the firm of John Holland.

She leaves to mourn her loss a father and brother in Ireland, two sisters, Lillian of this city and the other known as Sister Rose in the religious world, who is connected with the convent in Los Angeles. Interment took place at Los Angeles.

THE MUSIC WAS EXCELLENT.

The excellent music rendered on Sunday by the choir of the Church of the Immaculate Conception was commented on by Bishop Guertin during his official visit here. At the high mass the senior choir, twenty voices, gave the following:

Kyrie Farmer's Mass
Gloria Gloza
Credo La Hache
Sanctus La Hache
Agnus Dei La Hache

The children's program at 8.30 a. m. was one of the best ever given by the fifty voices that make up the choir. Much was added to the musical service by the solo and duet work of Frank Hogan, Emmett O'Leary and J. Fullam. A beautiful organing chorus was given by twenty voices from the Parochial school that would be hard to duplicate by a young choir in any diocese of the state.
